the city of New York, have watched with selicitude PHAR SIR—We, the undersigned citizens and taxpayers of the city of New York, have watched with soficitude and approval your various efforts since your entrance into the Common Conneil in 1857, to investigate the causes of alleged mismaagement of our city affairs, and to expose the corruptions and disarders under which the city was a profit to suffer. The position you have assumed is one of such vital interest to us that we desire to know the circumstances under which you are placed, the nature and progress of the work under your supervision, what it is designed to accomplish, and the means and time required for its thorough completion. We have noticed that in May, 1827, while you were a member of the Common Council, through your efforts, a committee was appointed to examine into the condition of the Finance Department. Your report of Cotober last, as Chairman of that Communitude, and its dusdaurs, have been since conditional by the publication of official statements as to the payments, the contracts, the assexments, the issue of hoads and the general details of the Street Department. You have now been engaged acveral months in this examination, and your answer to the inquiries contained herein will enable our citizens generally to appreciate your position, and your answer to the inquiries contained herein will enable our citizens generally to appreciate your position, and to determine what means, if any, may be necessary to assist you and strengthen you in the labors you have undertaken. Very respectfully,

Second. What is the correct amount of pest due assessments.

Third. What is the amount for which the Bureau of Arrears should be held responsible.

Fourth. No man can comprehend the true condition of the trust accounts of the city.

And is our present Comptroller really altogether to blame? The charter of 1849 provides that he shall direct the form and manner of keeping and rendering the public accounts. But the heads of the various departments were elected by the people, and what has been the result?

First. Collecting officers, who held their appointments under other departments, did not and would not comply with the requirements of the law, nor the directions of the Comptroller, either in the manner of keeping their accounts or of making their returns.

Second. Payments on awards and contracts for local improvements have been made in gross error, on false or erroneous requisitions from other departments, as in the case of Canal and Walker streets, Beckman street, and other cases.

Third. The Comptroller has been measureable at the quirements to be filled by an experienced a countant. He should be required to audit, not only a ch accounts as may be presented for payment, but all the allowances and computations in the several departments, on which claims of certain descriptions for very large amounts are based. This would herve to frustrate consistances at improper claims at their beginning, and to fix the responsibility of attempts at fraud or collusion where it justly belongs.

billy of attempts at fraud or collision where it justly belongs.

To show the practical working of such an auditing bureau as I have suggested a plan for—under the conviction that it must become a prominent feature in any well considered system for conducting efficiently the affairs of the Finance Perpartment—I will state its amplication to a class of accounts which seem in the light of recent developments, to have afforded peculiar temptations to and facilities for frauds. I refer to those connected with assessments for street improvements. I have experienced great difficulty in Exing the responsibility for the numerous errors, over allowances and irregularities which we have traced in these accounts. In the absence of any auditing or accounting worthy the name, alterations in confracts and certificates, errors in extensions, footings and transcripts, erasures, interlinings and overwritings, although of frequent and designed occurrence, cannot always be definitely taxed to the culpable parties—each department acting independently of or in concert with others, as selish interests might dictate. Responsibility is thus shifted from one to aucther, according to the circumstances of the casse.

When the contract for a given work is awarded and the from one to another, according to the circumstances of the case.

When the contract for a given work is awarded and the

When the contract for a given work is awarded and the centract drawn up for execution, the first auditing should commence, and the sodiffing accountant should make the requisite examination to enable him to certify to its conformity to the terms of the accepted bid or estimate, and the specification upon which it is founded.

Three copies from the original centract, duly certified, should be furnished for the use of the Comptroller, Surveyor's return should be furnished for the use of the Comptroller, Surveyor's return should be furnished to the Street Commissioner, and in duplicate to the Comptroller and Board of Assessors. The Surveyor should be required to certify that his return included no work not embraced in the contract, nor any which was not performed in conformity to its specific conditions. The assessment list, when completed, should be examined critically by the auditing accountant, and his certificate to the correctness of the computations and footing, and to its agreement with the contract, be required before being acted upon by the Common Council.

Upon the confirmation of an assessment list a certificat confraction of furnished the Finance Department, when a proper account should be opened by the bookkeeper with the improvement for which the assessment is authorized, to which should be charged, upon the Accounting Auditor's certificate, the payments made by the Controller to contractors, surveyor, &c., the account with the improvement for which the different should be credited all collections thereon made by the Collector of Assessments and Clerk of Arrears, for delinquencies—the Chamberlain being at the same time charged therewith.

The ledger containing these accounts would show the amount paid, the amount collected and the amount due on any assessment is at any given date. The Collector should be charged with the amount of each list, as placed by the found and accounts which is a supposed.

are time charged therewith.

The ledger coataining these accounts would show the amount paid, the amount collected and the amount due on any assessment list at any given date. The Collector should be charged with the amount of each list, as placed in his hands, and an account, to be styled "Assessment account," credited with the same. As collections are made, they should be charged to assessment account, and credited to the Collector. At the end of twelve ments from the date of the confirmation an auditing of the Collector's account on each list would determine the amount proper to be charged to the Bureau of Arrears, the Collector's return for which should be accepted by the clerk of that bureau upon the certificate of its accuracy by the auditing accountant.

On this final auditing, the Collector's account with each improvement should balance. The balance of the assessment account would always show to what extent outstanding assessment bonds were in excess of uncollected assessments, if at any time such should be the fact.

If the Collector should receive payment for assessment bonds were in excess of uncollected assessments, if at any time such should be the fact.

If the Collector should receive payment for assessment, and fail to discharge them of record or to pay the money to the Chamberlain, and should nected the same in his return to the Bureau of Arrears, the notices issued to the apparent delinquents would be pretty sure to bring the fact of prior payment to light.

Every discrepancy between the recorda, payments to Chamberlain, and return to Bureau of Arrears, would be certainly detected in the final auditing referred to.

This method of auditing and recording should be applied to the accounts of every collecting officer, varying the details to meet the peculiar requirements of each, and if once intelligently established and persisted in, could not fail of t the proper recording of the city officers. Transactions that the books of a bank do of the financial transactions of its officers.

Under such a method of auditing and bookkeeping as I have matured, not only would the liability to losses by negligence and fraud be greatly lessened—if not entirely removed—but a balance sheet from the principal ledger would be a self-explanatory report, showing at a giance the expenditures in every department of the city government under proper captions, the amount of collected revenues from every source, the amounts uncollected, and who are held responsible, the state of all accounts for which appropriations have been authorized, the true cost of the city's property and the true amount of the city's indebtedness, whether in floating or bonded debt. Such an exhibit, in short, as every prudent merchant require from his bookkeeper, and such as every citizen has a right to expect from the chief officer of the finance department of the city of New York.

Unless the revelations which have been made, and which have formed the groundwork of these suggestions shall be deemed of importance enough to induce action on the part of those concerned, in having a more creditable financial history in future, I fear some future explorer in the mines of official corruption will gather materials for another volume, which, if it do not surpass that now being written in the value of its teachings, will at leas, could it in the record of starting and disparencyli feets.

the mines of official corruption will gather materials for another volume, which, if it do not surpass that now being written in the value of its teachings, will at leasing an it in the record of starting and disgraceful facts.

The public convenience and interest would doubtless be promoted by a radical change in the mode of collecting assessments, reats and other revenues. By the presendivision of the collections among several collectors, having no strict supervision from a central bureau or chief, and conducting the affairs of their respective offices without unity of plan and in buildings apart from each other, very considerable inconvenience is occasioned those having payments to make for several descriptions of dues, too much time being consumed in zearching for the different offices, and in the delay incident to periods of activity in payments—this delay being liable to occur at every office.

Were the collections all placed under the charge of one collector, with a corps of competent clerks, the duties of the bureau could be so aliothed and the routine of labor so systematized as to bring all the operations of the office under the ready oversight of the Collector, and the business of the payers of city dues be greatly facilitated by being enabled to procure the discharge of the several liens with as much despatch as is now practicable for any one of them.

Under the present arrangement, the business of collective.

under the reasy oversignt of the collector, and the business of the payers of city dues be greatly facilitated by being enabled to procure the discharge of the several liena with as much despatch as is now practicable for any one of them.

Under the present arrangement the business of collections is so much diffused—the public moneys reach the treasury through so many channels—that the difficulty of fixing the responsibility for negligence or more serious faults is much greater than would be the case if all the collections were subject to a uniform plan, and placed under the control of one collector, who could neither evade nor divide the responsibilities of his position.

To the books and accounts of this officer access should at all times be had by the auditing accountant of the Finance Department, who should also be permitted, under the Comptroller's sanction, to prescribe such books and forms of accounts as would beat promote clear and accurate accounting and thorough auditing. If the public moneys were withheld from the treasury under this plan of collecting, there would be intle difficulty in fastening the embezzlement upon the guilty party.

Checks could be established in cancelling liens that would render the withholding of moneys a very hazardous and difficult matter, especially if the auditing accountant of the Finance Department performed his duty in frequent and critical examinations.

The receipts of money, the discharges of liens, and the book entries of these transactions, three distinct duties, should be assigned to as many clerks, at separate desis, and the receipt given on the discharge of every lien should bear upon its face the evidence that the payment had been made, that it had been given in the cash book of the bookkeeper.

Such a state of affairs as now exists could not possibly occur nuder this regulation. This transfer of all the collections to one bureau is also recommended in view of its greater economy.

The expense of collections by one collector, with ample clarical aid, allowing

Mr. Masserr's Entertainment.-Mr. Stephen Massett, who has been favorably known to the reading public as "Pipes of Pipesville," has met with a merited success in the two series which he has recently given at Niblo's Saloon. Mr. Massett's entertainment, in its design, is similar to Albert Smith's and might be termed a photograph of travel. Mr. Smith's travels, however, do not extend beyond the continent of Europe, while Mr. Massett has visited Europe, Colfornia, Australia and India. To an American andlence Mr. Massett's monograph is much more interesting than that of Albert Smith would be. Mr. Massett is one of the eleveract of vacon tems and the most amosting of mimics. He has an excellent voice, and sines ballads with laste and dramatic expression, a rare gift. He keeps his audience on the gui size from the beginning to the end of the entertainment, and sends them home in the happiest frame of mind. In the face of all the public amusements of the metropolis, and with his unsided efforts, Mr. Massett has attracted full and fishionable audiences. On this evening he will give his entertainment at Hoboken, and on Friday at Brooklyn. We assure our suburban readers that they cannot do botter than to assist at Mr. Massett's zoirves. the two seiries which he has recently given at Niblo's

The increase in the specie line is less than was expected as the California remittance exceeded the export by half a million, and even the shipment by the Vanderbilt was probably counted in the specie on hand. It is to be presumed that remittances must have been made to the country. The decline in loans arises not from any desire to curtail on the part of the bank, but from the imposibility of finding suitable mercaptile paper to discount. The deposits, vary with singular suddenness. For the past two weeks we have had a decline in the gross deposits averaging over two millions a week: we have now an increase of a million and a half. The undrawn deposits, which are after all the only true test of the business in this department, vary much less. They have stood for three weeks as fellows:-There is not much change to report in the stock market. This morning there was a fair demand for State stocks and the better class of railroad bonds for temporary investment; the purchases being made by parties who hav money coming in from dividends and other sources, and who cannot use it in their ordinary business. In former years this class of individuals used to employ their means at this season of the year in operating in the speculative stocks of the day; now, it would seem they have grown wiser, and exchew everything like a railroad or a steambeat stock. The purchases of these inventors this morning caused a rise of 14 per cent in Missouri 6's and in Minnesota S's; Tennessees were likewise 1/2 better. Illi-nois Central bonds were higher; La Crosse land grants were firm, and generally there was a better market for all descriptions of bonds. Coal stocks were likewise a shade higher; 75 was bid for Pennsylvania Coal, and Delaware and Hudson was 34 higher. In bank stocks there was very little done; we note an improvement of 14 per cent in Ocean Bank. The speculative stocks were irregular and unsettled. Pacific Mail opened this morning at an advance of 14 per cept; the advance was lost

New York Central, in the same way, opened bet ter this morning, but fell off on the second call; railled again, and was sold at the noon board at an advance of % over the morning price. Erle seems to be taking a downward course; it fell to-day & per cent. Reading looked rather weak this moraing, but recovered in the afternoon, and closed at an advance. A correspondent figures the stock and debt of this concern at $21,900,000. It is our impression that this figure is rather higher than the fact, but so long as the Reading keeps its affairs a secret it cannot but be liable to some instances better to day. Michigan Southern is steady; Central is 3/2 per cent better; Galena, which has risen in expectation of a scarnity of stock on the opening, is % higher; Rock Island, after some fluctuation, closed at yesterday's price. The following are Kowalski's closing prices after the second board:—Pacific Mail, 166% a %; Central, 81 % a %; Eric, 75 a %; Reading, 47% a %; Michi gan Central, 52½ n ½; Southern, 23 a ½; Illinois Central, 78 a 80; Panoma, 118 a ½; Galena, 84 a ½; Rock Island, 64% a K; La Crosse, 4 a 4%.
